Home chefs use new technology to cook with ease

STATEPOINT
Home cooks are spending more time in their own kitchens and less time out, according to the January Monthly Measuring Cup Trend Report. Half of surveyed women said they're trying new dishes at home with inspiration from social sites inspired by beautiful visuals and ideas from different cultures, according to the January Monthly Measuring Cup.

makers to measuring cups that have built-in digital scales, new innovations are making common kitchen prep tools more intuitive. The research and design experts at Delta Faucet spent years studying home cooks before introducing Touch2O Technology in 2008, a first-of-its-kind tap-on and tap-off technology for kitchen faucets. With this technology, users can start the flow of water with a forearm and or wrist when hand and messy, helping to keep the kitchen clean.

Smarter kitchen clean up
All that hard work in the kitchen doesn't end there. The monthly measuring cup report shows that home chefs are spending more time in their own kitchens and less time out, according to the January Monthly Measuring Cup Trend Report.

A woman with brown hair and bangs, smiling, stands next to a large red sign. She is wearing a black t-shirt with the text "Get real low prices" and a name tag that says "Judy". To her left is a large, clear candy machine filled with colorful, round candies. The red sign behind her has the text "Welcome! Glad you're here!" in white and yellow, and the Ralphs logo with the tagline "Great food. Real low prices." in white.
